Marco Polo was in China
New Evidence from Currencies, Salts and Revenues

Hans Ulrich Vogel
Institute of Asian and Oriental Studies
Department of Chinese and Korean Studies
Eberhard Karls Universität Tübingen
Contents

List of Figures, Maps and Tables

Preface from Mark Elvin

Préface de Philippe Ménard

Preface from the Author

Acknowledgments

Transliteration and Conventions

I. Introduction
- 1. Structure and Contents of this Book
- 2. Approaches and Methods
- 3. Cons and Pros for Marco Polo’s Stay in China
  - 3.1. Authorship of the Book
  - 3.2. Complexities of Manuscript Transmission
  - 3.3. Nature, Style, Intentions and Reception of the Book
  - 3.4. Itinerary and Data
  - 3.5. Persian Rendering of Chinese Place Names
  - 3.6. Aspects of Chinese and Mongol Civilization and Culture
  - 3.7. “Latins” at Khubilai’s Court
  - 3.8. Participation in the Xiangyang Siege
  - 3.9. Governorship in Yangzhou
  - 3.10. Missions of the Polos
  - 3.11. The Polos and Chinese Sources
  - 3.12. Return from China
  - 3.13. Golden Tablets of Authority

II. Paper Money in Yuan China
- 1. Marco Polo on Yuan Paper Money (1275-1291)
- 2. Other Western, Persian and Arabic Mediaeval Authors on Yuan Paper Money
- 3. The Short-lived Issue of Yuan-style Paper Money in Persia in 1294
- 4. Chinese Sources on Paper Money during the Yuan Period (1271-1368)
  - 4.1. Aspects of Production
    - a. The Imperial Mint in Cambaluc
    - b. Paper
    - c. Printing
    - d. Form and Size
    - e. Blockprint Face Designs and Legends
    - f. Seals and Inscriptions
    - g. Denominations
  - 4.2. Aspects of Circulation
    - a. State Monopolisation of Gold, Silver, Pearls and Gems
    - b. Counterfeiting Regulations
    - c. Exchange of Worn-out Notes
    - d. Public Revenues and Expenditures
    - e. Market Transactions
f. Circulation Area

5. Yuan Paper Money: Comparing Marco Polo’s Account and Chinese Sources

III. Cowry Monies Circulating in Yunnan and Southeast Asia
1. Marco Polo on Cowry Currency (1275-1291)
2. Chinese Sources on Yunnan Cowry Currencies during the Yuan Period (1271-1368)
   2.1. Exchange Rates
   2.2. Denominations
   2.3. Cowry Imports
   2.4. Cowry Currency in Private Transactions
   2.5. Cowry Money in Public Revenue and Finance
3. Yunnan Cowry Currencies: Comparing Marco Polo’s Account and Chinese Sources

IV. Salt Production and Salt Monies in Yunnan and Tebet
1. Marco Polo on Salt Production in Yunnan (1275-1291)
2. Marco Polo on Salt Currencies in Tebet and Caidiu (1275-1291)
3. Chinese Sources on Salt Currencies (Late Eighth to Mid-Twentieth Centuries)
   3.1. Nanzhao Kingdom (Late Eighth Century)
   3.2. Yuan Period (Early Fourteenth Century)
   3.3. Ming Period (Mid-Fifteenth Century)
   3.4. Qing Period (Eighteenth to Nineteenth Centuries)
   3.5. Republican Period (Mid-1930s)
   3.6. People’s Republic of China (1950s)
4. Salt Forms Produced by Yunnan Saltworks (Early Eighteenth Century)
   4.1. Dry-boiled Salt Forms
   4.2. Salt Forms Made by Hand or Moulds
5. Salt Currencies: Comparing Marco Polo’s Perceptions and Chinese Sources
   5.1. Weight of Salt Currencies
   5.2. Value of Salt Currencies
   5.3. Salt Prices in Caidiu and other Regions of China
   5.4. Circulation and Monetary Functions of Salt Currencies
   5.5. Salt Monies, Governments and Markets

V. Production, Revenue and Trade of Salt in Changlu and Lianghuai
1. Marco Polo on Salt Production Techniques in Changlu
2. Marco Polo on the Salt Production and Distribution Zone of Lianghuai
3. Did Marco Polo Hold an Office in Yangzhou?

VI. Tax Revenue of Hangzhou and its Territory
1. Marco Polo’s Millions: The Salt Tax Revenue
2. Total Annual Revenue as Reported by the Venetian
3. Commercial Taxes in the Le devisament dou monde
4. Marco Polo on Levies in Overseas Trade in Quanzhou

VII. Administrative-Geographical Divisions in Yuan China

VIII. Conclusions
Appendices

Appendix 1: Compilation of Passages on the Production and Use of Paper Money in the Yuan Empire from Selected Manuscript and Print Versions of Marco Polo’s Account

Appendix 2: Compilation of Passages on the Production and Use of Chinese Paper Money and Salt Revenue in the Accounts of Other Western, Persian and Arabic Authors

Appendix 3: Coins of Venice

Appendix 4: The Weight Measures libbra and saggio of Venice

Appendix 5: The Weight of the miskal

Appendix 6: Relationship between the Persian System of balish, sum and miskal, the Chinese System of ding, liang and qian, and Marco Polo’s saggi and grossi

Appendix 7: Compilation of Passages on Chinese Salt Money, Salt Production and Salt Revenue from the Most Important Manuscript and Print Versions of Marco Polo’s Account

Appendix 8: Tables 3 and 27

Bibliography

Marco Polo Editions
Other Primary Sources
Secondary Literature