Barbara Gruber is a Teach@Tübingen Fellow, a PhD candidate at the University of Groningen, and an incoming Lecturer at the Danube University in Krems (Austria). Her main research interests lie at the intersection of critical security studies and resilience. She has several years of practical experience working at the Austrian Institute for International Affairs in a project engaged with resilience in disaster management, cyber security and counter-terrorism. In this talk, she will present the findings of her PhD research on the role of resilience in radicalisation prevention policies with an empirical focus on the Netherlands.
