The Second RIKS Academy for Young Korean Studies Scholars

PROGRAM OBJECTIVES

Domestic and overseas Korean Studies have witnessed both quantitative and qualitative developments with the increased number of researchers and scholars throughout the world. Young researchers in Korean Studies are, however, having difficulties finding programs in which they can learn about cutting-edge academic trends and enhance their own research expertise. They are also seeking ways to engage in mutual communication and share their ideas and research outcomes. To promote the active communication among scholars with different academic backgrounds, perspectives, and research methodologies, the Research Institute of Korean Studies (RIKS) at Korea University, as one of the leading institutions for Korean Studies research since 1957, has been holding the RIKS Academy for Young Korean Studies Scholars since last year.

This academy is designed to help young scholars strengthen their expertise and to grow their network with others in the field of Korean Studies. With the expectation that this academy will be a valuable asset to expand the boundaries of Korean Studies, the main programs of the academy are: (1) Intensive courses taught by leading scholars in Korean Studies, and (2) Graduate student participants' presentations and discussions on their research topics. Prospective participants are invited to submit an application.
