Tübingen, 26.09.2018

The University of Tübingen was placed at 89 in this year's Times Higher Education World University Ranking of 1258 institutions worldwide, up from 94th place last year. In Germany, Tübingen moved up two places and now ranks 7th out of 47 German institutions of higher education analyzed. Tübingen has now been in the THE top 100 since 2015.

Tübingen improved in the key categories of teaching and third-party funding, reflecting our policy of strengthening these and other areas in recent years. The president of the University of Tübingen, Professor Bernd Engler, welcomed the THE survey, saying the result was linked to the further improvement of teaching and research.

The Times Higher Education World University Ranking is one of the big three - along with the QS and Shanghai Rankings - in the field of assessing universities' quality. It uses 13 separate performance indicators to examine a university's strengths against all of its core missions – teaching, research, knowledge transfer and international outlook.
