Over 200 million people under the age of 34 now form the largest demographic in the Middle East. This not only presents a unique opportunity for the region yet also poses hitherto unforeseen challenges. In this presentation, Mr. Abaas Yunas offers the findings and implications from one of the largest surveys to date conducted amongst Arab millennials. Inquiring into their attitudes towards the religious establishment, faith and identity politics, Mr Yunas' important research portends the regions reconfiguration of religion in the 21st century.

Abaas Yunas is Head of the Futures Initiative at Tabah Foundation (UAE) and has extensive international experience of engagement with religious leadership and interfaith dialogue.
