Linguistic Evidence 2012
Poster Reception
Thursday February 9th 18:10-20:00, Brechtbau 027

Gemma Boleda[1], Stefan Evert[2], Berit Gehrke[1] & Louise McNally[1] (1: Pompeu Fabra; 2: TU Darmstadt): A Logistic Regression Model for adjectival modification vs. modification by prepositional phrases

Oliver Bott & Fabian Schlotterbeck (Tübingen): Limits to the interpretation of reciprocals with quantificational antecedents

Fernanda Canever (São Paulo): Ever-changing grammars: evidence from a usage-based study of the inflected infinitive in Brazilian Portuguese

Sofiana Iulia Chiriacescu (Stuttgart): Differential Object Marking and Topic Shift

Dan Dediu[1] & Michael Cysouw[2] (1: MPI Nijmegen; 2: LMU München):Some Aspects of Language are More Stable than Others: A Comparison of Five Methods

Annika Deichsel & Klaus von Heusinger (Stuttgart): Specificity and Referential Persistence – An Experimental Study of Indefinites in German

Marisa Delz, Benjamin Layer, Sarah Schulz & Johannes Wahle (Tübingen): Simulating language history

Jeruen E. Dery & Jean-Pierre Koenig (Buffalo): Discourse Expectations and their Effects on Temporal Update

Miriam Ellert & Anke Holler (Göttingen): The influence of different types of connectives on on-line anaphora resolution

Kristina Geeraert (Alberta): I drunk or I have drank? An Investigation of Levelling in the English Strong Verb Paradigm

Michael Haugh[1], Simon Musgrave[2] & Andrea C. Schalley[1] (1: Griffith; 2: Monash): A new resource for linguistic evidence: the Australian National Corpus Johannes Heim (Tübingen): Categorizing Parasitic Gaps: Which label did you use without expanding?

Philip Hofmeister[1], Peter Culicover[2] & Susanne Winkler[3] (1: Stanford; 2: Ohio; 3: Tübingen): Effects of processing on the acceptability of 'frozen' extraposed constituents

Eva Horch & Ingo Reich (Stanford): On the Existence of Object Gaps in 'SLF-coordination'

Xiaochen Hu, Susanne Winkler & Susanne Reiterer (Tübingen): An interdisciplinary approach to individual variation in L2 English pronunciation: behavioural predictors and neurobiological underpinnings

Tom S. Juzek (Oxford): Comparing the Methods used to Measure Grammatical Acceptability

Andreas Konietzko, Eleonore Schwilling, Karen Lidzba, Ingeborg Krägeloh-Mann, Nancy Nickisch & Susanne Winkler (Tübingen): Processing Complex Syntax in Reorganized Language

Stefano Rastelli & Arianna Zuanazzi (Pavia): Pronouns drop, but soon they are on their feet again: complicating the Syntax-discourse interface in L2 Italian

Chiara Semplicini (Perugia): Language Change and Language Variation between Syntax, Semantics and Pragmatics: the case of Dutch Double Gender Nouns

Linguistic Evidence 2012
Poster Lunch
Friday February 10th 12:00-14:00, Brechtbau 027

Peter Culicover (Ohio): Constructions, complexity and word order variation

Irmgard de la Vega, Mónica De Filippis, Carolin Dudschig, Martin Lachmair & Barbara Kaup (Tübingen): When does the repugnant snake show? Using approach and avoidance mechanisms to investigate the emergence of meaning in sentences

Aleksandar Dimitrov, Christian Fortmann, Anja Lübbe & Irene Rapp (Tübingen): Psycholinguistic evidence in the semantic and pragmatic analysis of prenominal present participles in German

Gisbert Fanselow[1] & Thomas Weskott[2] (1: Potsdam; 2: Göttingen): On the effect of competitor structures on acceptability judgments

Kay González-Vilbazo, Laura Bartlett, Sarah Downey, Shane Ebert, Jeanne Heil, Bradley Hoot, Bryan Koronkiewicz & Sergio Ramos (Chicago): Theory and Experiment: Toward Best Practices in Code-switching Research

Martin Lachmair, Mónica De Filippis, Carolin Dudschig, Irmgard de la Vega & Barbara Kaup (Tübingen): Towards inherent location information: when up-words meet down-sentences

Monique Lamers[1] & Bob van Thiel[2] (1: VU Amsterdam; 2: Nijmegen): Who or what we talk about: A comparative corpus study on the animacy structure of transitive sentences and sentence subjects

Gabriella Lapesa[1] & Alessandro Lenci[2] (1: Osnabrück; 2: Pisa): Italian Verbs of Manner of Motion at the Syntax-Semantics Interface: a Distributional Analysis

Jing Lin & Hedde Zeijlstra (Amsterdam): Shenme as a Negative Polarity Indefinite in Mandarin Chinese: evidence from first language acquisition

Jiawen Luo (Chung Cheng): Empirical Evidence for the Effect of Eventuality Counting Expressions on Covert Dependencies

Roland Mühlenbernd & Michael Franke (Tübingen): Signaling Conventions in Small-World Networks

Joanna Nykiel (Silesia): English Elliptical Constructions and Preposition Omission

Sandra Pappert, Christian Hense & Thomas Pechmann (Leipzig): Persistence of meaning vs. form in German sentence production

Svetlana Petrova (HU Berlin): Functions of anaphors in discourse: insights from historical data

Nezrin Samedova (Baku): Applying Data from a Corpus to One Aspectological Issue, Or Once More on the Heuristic and Explanatory Power of the Kruszewski-Kuryłowicz Rule

Cristina Sánchez-Marco[1], Rafael Marín[2] & Stefan Evert[3] (1: Pompeu Fabra; 2: CNRS, Lille; 3: TU Darmstadt): Measuring lexical extension: The case of Spanish estar + past participle

Mareike Schmid, Sonja Tiemann, Sigrid Beck, Ingo Hertrich & Bettina Rolke (Tübingen): Immediate processing of the uniqueness-Presupposition of the definite Noun Phrase: Evidence from word-by-word reading-time data

Alexandra Anna Spalek (Pompeu Fabra): An Underspecified Meaning for Romper, "break" – Evidence from Corpus

Esme Winter-Froemel (Tübingen): The diffusion of lexical innovations in French: Critical reflections on the S-curve hypothesis

Alessandra Zarcone, Lukas Michelbacher & Janna Lipenkova (Stuttgart): Easy/difficult-constructions as triggers of implicit content: comparing covert event elicitations and events extracted from a very large corpus

Amir Zeldes: Novel Argument Realization: Semantic, Pragmatic and Conventional Productivity Effects