

Networking Workshop for PhD
students

in Research Areas of Religion, Culture, and Society

Friday, January 24, 2025
in Tübingen

The Center for Religion, Culture and Society (CRCS) invites you once again to the PhD Networking Workshop! The event is aimed at doctoral students from the University of Tübingen who are conducting research on topics related to religion.

The goal of the workshop is to connect early-career researchers who work on religion-related topics in the fields of Theology as well as the Humanities, Cultural Studies, and Social Sciences. By introducing different qualification projects, research interests, and methodological approaches, the event fosters interdisciplinary exchange and aims to understand the study of religion in all its diverse aspects. On this day, doctoral students will have the chance to showcase their projects through a brief presentation to an audience of peers from diverse disciplinary backgrounds, followed by an engaging discussion. Presentations can be given in either German or English.

If you are interested in participating in the workshop and presenting your project, please register by emailing crcs@uni-tuebingen.de by December 10, 2024, including your field of study and project title. The number of participants is limited. When registering, please indicate the possible language of your presentation and whether your supervisor will be attending.

The workshop will be moderated by the two directors of the CRCS, Prof. Dr. Holger Zellentin and Prof. Dr. Monique Scheer. Supervisors of the participating doctoral students are also warmly invited to join the discussions.

We look forward to seeing many doctoral candidates present their research projects, support each other with contributions to the discussion, and take the opportunity to get to know each other and network!
