GREETING

When the Korean Studies program at the University of Tübingen was reopened twelve years ago with the 2010 appointment of a junior professor, hardly anyone could have guessed how popular it would quickly become. Especially since the major, which had existed since 1964, was closed in the early 2000s in response to low enrollment.

Today we have almost 400 students, and record numbers of applicants have necessitated restrictions on the number students we admit. With our Bachelor's, Master's, and a double master's programs with Seoul National University (MAKES), in addition to the Tuebingen Center for Korean Studies at Korea University (TUCKU) in Seoul, we have laid a solid foundation for a successful program. We have also added staff members who have allowed us to leave behind the exciting development years and enter a new consolidation phase.

We hope that Korean Studies at the University of Tübingen, now recognized as a training center for new Korea experts, will strengthen the 'Korea competence' in Germany and enrich our understanding and analysis of developments in Korea through innovative research.

On the 10th anniversary of opening the TUCKU branch, this report summarizes development that occurred between 2010 and 2022. The report is a small thank you to our friends and sponsors in recognition of their tireless support, both material and intellectual. At the same time, it also documents the recent history of a small but growing major. I warmly thank the team of Korean Studies at Tübingen for their fruitful cooperation. Special thanks goes to Max Altenhofen for the text editing and Hansol Heo for the layout design.

I hope you enjoy reading this report!

You Jae Lee

HISTORY

In 1964, Sinologist Werner Eichhorn founded the “Seminar for East Asian Philology” at the Faculty for Classical and Cultural studies at the University of Tübingen, consisting of the Department of Sinology and the Department of Japanese and Korean Studies. Despite the lack of Korean Studies faculty, language classes and basic lectures were introduced. Starting in 1974, the East Asian Studies Department expanded significantly. The existing chair for Sinology was joined by a chair for Japanese Studies in 1975, and a chair for Korean Studies in 1979, to which Professor Dieter Eikemeier was appointed.

Under the management of Prof. Eikemeier, the Department of Korean Studies and the Department of Sinology were reorganized to form the Seminar of Chinese and Korean Studies. During the winter semester of 1981/82, Magister-Degree programs were established for the Korean Studies major and minor. Between 1979 and 2003, the department pursued an ethnological approach, focusing on rural communities and folk religion. Under the management of Prof. Eikemeier, an extensive Korean Studies library was also constructed.

During this time Korean Studies was regarded as a niche-field that attracted few students, even when compared with other smaller programs. During the winter semester of 1986/87, for example, 153 students enrolled in Japanese Studies and 286 in Chinese Studies, while only twenty-one enrolled in Korean Studies. In the wake of the Solidarity Pact and austerity measures, the University Board decided to close the Korean Studies Department early in 1998. With the retirement of Prof. Eikemeier in 2003, Korean Studies was removed from the list of programs at the University of Tübingen.

This decision was immediately controversial and was criticized by the departments of Japanese and Chinese Studies, which were rapidly expanding at the time. With the support of these departments, as well as funds from the Academy of Korean Studies and the Korea Foundation, Dr. Moon-Ey Song was able to maintain a small curriculum in the field of Korean Studies and established a Bachelor minor degree program in 2004. With the founding of the Institute of Asian and Oriental Studies in 2008, the institutional relationship between Asian and Oriental Studies was restructured. Chinese and Korean Studies were incorporated into the newly formed institute to represent the field-specific interests as a separate department inside the Faculty of Cultural Studies. In the same year, responding to continued efforts by the East Asian Studies Department, the University Board agreed to reintroduce a professorship for Korean Studies. A Junior-Professorship was introduced first, as it was unclear how popular a Korean Studies program might be.

In April 2010, You Jae Lee was appointed a W1-Professor in the department. As a historian, he pursues research in everyday and global history in the fields of colonialism, the Cold War, migration, and diaspora. For the winter semester of 2010/11, Prof. Lee developed a Bachelor's program with a focus on modern Korea that included a year of studying abroad in Korea. He began with eight students in the newly established major. The winter semester of 2014/15 saw the addition of a consecutive master's program, as well as a dual master's program in Korean European Studies (MAKES) with Seoul National University. In response to these newly offered programs student enrollments increased rapidly.

≡ Timeline

With the addition of two more Junior Professors, the Korean Studies Department was able to expand the subjects of its research and teaching. Professor Jong-Chol An supported the area of law and society of Korea from 2014 until 2019. Professor Jérôme de Wit brought expertise on Korean culture and literature to the Department of Korean Studies from 2015 until 2021.

By adding lecturers and teaching staff, as well as investing extensive effort to secure external funding, the non-professorial teaching staff was expanded, too. Considering the department's growth, the University Directorate decided to establish a W3-Professor position to chair the department, to which You Jae Lee was appointed in April 2018. In the summer semester of 2018, the research personnel increased to fourteen.

Additionally, the Department of Korean Studies became an independent department for the first time. In that same year, the Center for Korean Studies was funded. As the number of students in the department increased to nearly 400, restrictions on the number of admitted students were introduced in 2019. In 2021, tenure-track Junior Professor Yewon Lee joined the department as a sociologist, and a lecturer position (Akademischer Rat) devoted to literature was created in April 2022.

In addition to the continued growth of the Department of Korean Studies, the founding of the Tübingen Center of Korean Studies at Korea University (TUCKU) in 2012 at the Korea University in Seoul established the infrastructure to support a stable international study program within the existing East-Asia strategy of the University of Tübingen. The King Sejong Institute Tübingen in the Department of Korean Studies also opened in 2012, and is responsible for cultural outreach to the public.

Organization

TUCKU AND KOREAN PARTNERS

East Asia plays an important role in the University of Tübingen's internationalization strategy. We are the only university in Europe to have branch offices in three East Asian countries: Japan, China, and South Korea. This demonstrates the importance given to East Asian Studies. As crucial points of interface, each branch office promotes exchange between the university and the respective country in a variety of ways.

The Tübingen Center for Japanese Studies (TCJS) was founded at Doshisha University in Kyoto in 1993. It was followed in 2001 by the European Center of Chinese Studies (ECCS) at Peking University, which is managed by a consortium of European universities that includes Tübingen. In August 2012, the Tübingen Center for Korean Studies at Korea University (TUCKU) opened in Seoul.

The TUCKU is located on the Korea University campus in the Research Institute of Korean Studies (RIKS) building. Established in 1905, Korea University is one of the oldest and most prestigious private universities in Korea. It currently enrolls 35,000 students and supports 1,400 faculty members in eighty-one departments and eighteen graduate schools. The managing director of TUCKU coordinates academic exchanges between the two universities. The managing director also lectures on German history and unification to Korean students, and assists students from Tübingen during their time in Korea.

While the TUCKU is a point of contact on academic questions for Tübingen students, it also helps students cope with everyday problems and supports internship searches. To this end, it maintains contacts with the German School, UNESCO, and various German and international companies and NGOs in Seoul. The TUCKU also organizes excursions for Tübingen students in Korea and organizes visits by delegations from Tübingen.

Furthermore, the TUCKU maintains contacts with its partner universities and is constantly working on expanding the scope of the partnerships. Partner universities of the University of Tübingen are, in alphabetical order:

- Chunbuk National University
- Chungnam National University
- Ewha Womans University
- Hanyang University
- Korea University
- Seoul National University
- Sogang University
- Sookmyung Women's University
- Sungkyunkwan University
- Yonsei University

Amongst the partner universities, Korea University and Seoul National University play particularly prominent roles. Located at the Korea University, the TUCKU is a close partner and accepts most of Tübingen's students. Seoul National University is the partner university for the double master's program MAKES.

≡ Visits of Rector and Dean

- 2010 / 2012 Rector's visit (Prof. Dr. Bernd Engler) to sign the cooperation contract between Korea University and University of Tübingen, and in 2012 to open the TUCKU
- 2013 Baden-Württemberg science delegation to TUCKU with Dr. Theresia Bauer—State Minister for Science, Research, and Art; and Rector Prof. Dr. Bernd Engler
- 2015 Dean's visit (Prof. Dr. Jürgen Leonhardt) to Jeju University, Seoul National University, and TUCKU
- 2017 Rector's visit (Prof. Dr. Bernd Engler) with a delegation of science and business members to TUCKU, with stops at Seoul National University, KAIST, and Korea University

THE KING SEJONG INSTITUTE TÜBINGEN

The King Sejong Institute (Sejonghak-dang) Foundation was established in 2012 by the South Korean government in order to promote Korean language and culture around the world. As of June 2021, there were 234 King Sejong Institutes in eighty-two countries.

The King Sejong Institute at the University of Tübingen was established in September 2012, and is the second such institute in Germany, preceded by the Berlin institute at the Korean Culture Center.

The King Sejong Institute offers free courses in the Korean language to any who are interested. Each semester, the King Sejong Institute in Tübingen educates approximately 100 students in the Korean language. In addition to language courses, the Institute offers a variety of activities that help participants better understand Korean culture. Presentations by guest lecturers, readings of their work by Korean authors, and trips to museums and exhibitions all familiarize the public with Korea and Korean culture.

STUDENTS AND PROGRAMS

Integrated B.A. in Korean Studies

The central and unique concept of Korean Studies in Tübingen is the integrated international degree program, embracing both the undergraduate and graduate levels, that allows students to study in Korea. During the three-year B.A. degree program, all students study in Korea for one year. From 2010 to 2014, this program was generously funded by the European Union through the EU ICI ECP program. To guarantee structural support for this international collaboration, the Tübingen Center for Korean Studies at Korea University (TUCKU) was founded in 2012.

As student enrollments increased, admission restrictions for major students (fifty) and minor students (twenty) were introduced in winter semester 2019/20. Initially, students take courses in history, society, and culture; in later semesters, they develop their own course of study. In addition, students engage in intercultural trainings and projects between their third and sixth semesters, including a project during their time studying abroad.

M.A. in Korean Studies and M.A. of Korean European Studies (MAKES)

In 2014, the two-year Korean Studies master's degree program was introduced. It includes both a single-master "M.A. in Korean Studies" and a double-master "Master of Korean European Studies" (MAKES) in partnership with Seoul National University (SNU). Besides SNU, M.A. students can attend Yonsei University and Korea University as exchange students.

MAKES has been successfully launched, and students continue to be attracted to this highly prestigious and unique program. In the year 2021, sixteen new students enrolled in the master's program.

M.A. East Asian Politics and Society (MAPGO)

In addition to the master's courses in Chinese Studies, Japanese Studies, and Korean Studies, the University of Tübingen also offers the social science-oriented East Asia master's program, East Asia Politics and Society (MAPGO). The program focuses on the analysis of political systems in Japan, Korea, and Greater China; relationships between current East Asian societies; and the further development of East Asian language skills.

This design offers students with a background in political science a program in which they can combine political science courses with an East Asian major. In addition to content-related courses in the three East Asian majors, this also includes the participation in language courses.

PhD Program

In conjunction with refinements to the MA program, the PhD program was also further developed. Since 2010, two students have successfully completed their PhD dissertations, and eight PhD candidates are currently enrolled. In lieu of coursework, Tübingen Korean Studies has established a program with intensive, internationally integrated research requirements and learning opportunities for its PhD candidates.

The five central components consist of the following:

1. A weekly PhD colloquium
2. A three-day workshop each semester
3. A regional doctoral student network
4. PhD workshops with students from the BK+ program in the Korean History Department at the Korea University
5. Graduate exchange program with Doshisha University and Korea University on Everyday History funded by the DAAD and KRF from 2018 on

RESEARCH

Modern Korea—and its relationship to Colonialism, the Cold War, and migration—has been the primary research focus of Tübingen Korean Studies, with several workshops and conferences on these topics since 2010. With the “Tübingen Global Korea Project”, research on the three core themes are approached from a global perspective. This introduced to Korean Studies new and innovative methodologies for approaching contemporary global challenges.

The inter-institutional research collaborations and international gatherings enrich and strengthen our research, and provides transnational synergy for collaborative research projects. We ultimately developed three new primary research fields: “History of Korean-German and Korean-European Relations”, “Everyday History in Korean Studies” and “Korean Diaspora in Europe”. These three topics will be the department’s focus over the next ten years. With its selection as an ‘Academy of Korean Studies (AKS) Strategic Research Institute’, the Center for Korean Studies in Tübingen will be the regional hub for research in these fields.

Research Projects

Korea and East Asia in Global History (2010 - 2015)

The project "Korea and East Asia in Global History, 1840-2000" was supported by the Academy of Korean Studies (AKS). The project approached modern Korea and East Asia in the context of global history.

The project focused on the following areas:

- Colonial empires and colonies
- Cultural translations
- Capitalism, labor, and migration
- Regionalism in East Asia

Members

- Sebastian Conrad and Jürgen Kocka (Free University Berlin)
- Dominic Sachsenmaier (Duke University)
- Keunsik Jung (Seoul National University)
- Michael Kim (Yonsei University)
- You Jae Lee (University of Tübingen)

Korean Migration History (2011 - 2013)

In 2011, Korean Studies in Tübingen hosted the international conference "Korean Diaspora. Beyond Colonialism and Cold War" in cooperation with the National Institute of Korean History (NIKH). This was followed by a research project titled "50 years of Korean miners in Germany (1963-2013) - an Oral History Project," funded by the NIKH in 2012 and gave Korean Studies in Tübingen the opportunity to close a large gap in Korean migration history, as the history of Korean miners in Germany is still largely unexplored.

As part of the project, ten interviews were conducted with former Korean miners. Portions of the research results are presented in the exhibition "Give me the coal - 50 years of Korean labor migration in Germany" (16.-19.12.2013), and in a volume of interviews translated by MA students from Tübingen and edited by Prof. You Jae Lee.

DFG Network Everyday History: Appropriating the World. Everyday History from a Transnational Perspective (2012 - 2015)

The network attempted to combine everyday history with transnational history. Based on the members' individual research projects, it explored the origins and significance of historical practices of entanglement and disentanglement, limitations, and dissolutions in everyday life. The network's forum would bring together two areas of research and discuss the results of their engagement.

Drawing on a predominantly micro-analytical everyday history and the historical actors, the network looked at interrelationships and forms of exchange, from the translocal to the transnational, that can not be captured with established reference values such as nation, locality, or even civilization. In particular, the connection to concepts such as transfer, entanglement, and global history played an important role.

The interdisciplinary and international group included fifteen researchers and other associates from historical, cultural, and social science disciplines. The results of the network were published in an anthology and in a special issue of a journal.

European Forum on Korean-Japanese History (2012 - 2018)

The forum was established as a platform to critically discuss the intertwined histories of Korea and Japan. It was founded in 2012 by historians of Japan and Korea, and exchanges took place every two years in the form of thematic workshops. A workshop on "Circuits of Knowledge, Goods, and People" was held in Brussels in December 2015, and another on "Gendered Histories in East Asia" at Tübingen 2017. The forum was funded by the National Institute of Korean History.

- Kwang Jae Kim (NIKH)
- Barak Kushner (University of Cambridge)
- You Jae Lee (University of Tübingen)
- Kiri Paramore (Leiden University)
- Monika Schimpf (University of Tübingen)
- Michael Shin (University of Cambridge)

TuDoKU - Tübingen University - Dōshisha University - Korea University (2015 - )

In 2015, Tübingen University, Dōshisha University, and Korea University decided to strengthen the ties between them by facilitating academic exchanges and by organizing annual workshops and conferences. With the TUCKU and the TCJS, the resulting triangle network is closely interconnected.

From 2017-18, TuDoKu was supported by the PaJaKo-Program of the DAAD, under a project with the title "Transnational Cultures: Korea, Japan, and Germany" and from 2019-21, the GEnKO-Program of the DAAD funded a project titled "Alltagsgeschichte in Korean Studies".

Tübingen Global Korea Project (2016 - 2021)

The Korean Studies Program at the University of Tübingen was selected to receive an 'Academy of Korean Studies (AKS) Core University Program for Korean Studies' grant, which provided funding from September 2016 to August 2021. During the five years of the "Tübingen Global Korea Project", we carried out three major initiatives:

1. Institutionalize Korean Studies by establishing an independent department and the Tübingen Center for Korean Studies.
2. Expand and consolidate international integrative programs offering the B.A., M.A., and PhD.
3. Strengthen research on modern Korea in a global perspective through three research units covering the Cold War, Colonialism and migration.

As part of the project,

three international conferences were organized:

- "Nationality and Transnationality in Modern Korea" 07-08.07.2017
- "Translational Turn in Modern Korea" 13-14.07.2018
- "The Developmental State and Social Conflicts in Cold War Korea" 12-13.07.2019

AKS Strategic Research Institute (2021 - 2031): "Korean Studies from a European Perspective"

The Center for Korean Studies at the University of Tübingen aims to establish a network of Korean Studies programs in Germany and Europe. The project contains the establishment of a joint E-School and fostering research on Korean-German and Korean-European relations.

Furthermore, it aims to establish an archive of the Korean Diaspora as part of Korean democratization and unification movements in conjunction with the Korean-German / Korean-European Academy for Peace.

Project Director

- You Jae Lee (University of Tübingen)

Associate Researchers

THIRD PARTY FUNDING IN TEACHING

Global Competence and Engagement for EU-Korean Multicultural Education (2010 - 2013)

Within the framework of the EU ICI Education Cooperation Program, the mobility of students and teachers was promoted, conferences were organized, and excursions were funded.

The aim was to offer the students a multicultural environment and to introduce them to excellent global research. It also laid the foundations for the double degree program MAKES with Seoul National University.

Participating Universities

- University of Tübingen
- INALCO
- Leiden University
- Seoul National University
- Sookmyung Women's University
- Chonbuk National University

MASTER 2016 Baden-Wuerttemberg (2014 - )

The MASTER 2016 program was launched by the federal state of Baden-Wuerttemberg in order to raise the number of master's degree students in relevant fields.

The Korean Studies program received funding to implement the new master's degree program starting in 2014. This included funds for a third Junior-Professor position, as well as support for a post-doctoral fellow and a doctoral student.

DAAD Integrated International Double Degree Programs (2014 - 2016)

Funded by the German Federal Ministry for Education and Research (BMBF), this program has supported the planning and implementation of the double degree program MAKES, a partnership between Tübingen and Seoul National University dating to the 2014/15 winter semester.

Three full student scholarships and the DAAD Program coordinator position were supported between 2014 and 2016.

E-School Program with SNUAC (2012- ) and Korea University (2019 - )

The Korean Studies Department at Tübingen and the Seoul National University Asia Center (SNUAC) cooperate in developing innovative teaching methods by offering an E-School program consisting of a lecture by an SNU professor streamed live for Korean Studies students in Germany. This program is organized by SNUAC and funded by the Korea Foundation. Since 2019, the Korean Studies Department at Tübingen and the Department of Political Science and International Relations at Korea University cooperate with a similar E-School program.

The Korea Foundation and the Academy of Korean Studies have supported the Korean Studies Tübingen since 2010 with various faculty programs.

Academy of Korean Studies, Faculty Funding

- AKS Visiting Professor Program, 2011-2013
- AKS Visiting Lecturer, 2009-2011

Korea Foundation, Faculty Funding

- KF Korean Language Education Internship Program, 2014-2017
- KF Junior-Professor Program, 2014-2020
- KF Visiting Professor Program, 2011-2012
- KF Language Instructor Position, 2010-2015
- KF Visiting Lecturer Winter Term, 2009/2010

CIVIS-KF Korean Studies E-School Consortium (2021 - )

The purpose of the CIVIS-KF Korean Studies E-School Consortium is to increase collaboration between the above-mentioned consortium universities, thus creating opportunities for students and teachers to meet, exchange ideas, and collaborate. In pursuit of this, the main objectives of the CIVIS-KF E-School consortium are:

- Offer various E-School courses in Korean Studies
- Offer an intensive teaching experience; promote the exchange of knowledge, ideas, and proposals on specific topics; stimulate new ideas and animate debates
- Enhance the digital mobility of CIVIS students and nurture an international mentality among students
- Create links between partner universities, academic staff, and students, while providing opportunities for networking
- Support collaborations and strategies in the fields of learning and research

Participating Universities

- University of Tübingen
- Sapienza University of Rome
- Stockholm University
- University of Bucharest
- Aix Marseille University

Funding for Cultural Programs

The King Sejong Institute Foundation, the General Consulate of the Republic of Korea in Frankfurt / Main, and other institutions supported cultural events.

Private Donations / Fellowships

The Korean Studies program was also successful in securing private donations from corporations like Hyundai and Kia. Asiana Airlines provided the "Flying Fellowships" for students and special rates on plane tickets to Korea for both staff members and students.
