

About the conference

Charles S. Peirce's article "A Neglected Argument for the Reality of God" represents the most extended treatment of a religious topic that he produced during a half-century of philosophizing.

Published in 1908, it has continued to remain somewhat neglected, drawing the interest over the years of only a handful of scholars specializing in the study of Peirce's thought.

The rationale for this conference is the conviction that it deserves much more serious attention from contemporary philosophers and theologians. It embodies not only the outline of a pragmatic philosophical theology, but also one of the most mature articulations of Peirce's theory of inquiry.

The twelve presentations included in this conference are dedicated to the careful interpretation of selected features of Peirce's argument, as well as comparisons with other thinkers and points of view.
